Inventory Management and Cycle Counting

at the Westchester Marriott, Tarrytown, NY

presented by Howard Forman and David Forman

AM Session: Smarter Inventory Management - How to Reduce Inventory & Improve Cash Flow Workshop

Today, companies are faced with increasingly complex and conflicting objectives as they strive to remain competitive in the global marketplace. Smarter inventory management is a critical ingredient to help a company achieve its financial and operational objectives. Failure to properly monitor, plan and control inventory can place a company at a competitive disadvantage.

This workshop is designed to provide the attendee with the basic knowledge and tools to help assess if a company is properly managing its inventory and identify potential inventory reduction and cash flow improvement opportunities. Upon completion of this workshop the participant will be able to:

- Understand the importance and financial impact of inventory
- Become aware of the steps required to optimize inventory levels
- Develop a plan to reduce inventory by 20 to 30% within 90 days
- Assess if inventory levels meet corporate and customer objectives
- Recognize appropriate inventory behavior and industry best practices

PM Session: Cycle Counting – The Road to Enlightenment

In these competitive times, companies face many challenges as they attempt to improve productivity, eliminate non-value costs, and reduce inventory levels. The road to improvement is often a long, winding, and time-consuming journey. A wrong turn becomes an invitation to frustration, conflict, delay, and unanticipated expense. Poor inventory accuracy is a major impediment that hinder companies from achieving their business goals.

The road to enlightenment begins with the establishment of a cycle counting trip plan. The plan starts with the identification and examination of ten critical activities needed for this trip. The plan then illustrates how to avoid common obstacles and pitfalls that might detour the journey. The plan next explores the various costs of this journey. Finally, before the journey ends, we will explore the question, “Are We There Yet?”
